"Is that you under there?"

"Yeah. Hang on, I'll be right out."

"Can you believe all the weirdness?"

"Have they figured out what caused it?"

"Do you remember that funky freakin meteor that hit on Halloween? Does that ring any bells?"

"Well DUH! I mean, do they know what it is about the meteor that caused everyone to become their Halloween fantasy or what they're gonna do to fix it?"

"The TV news is all sayin that the government's got it under control and not to worry about anything. They're gonna get it fixed real soon..."

"We're screwed."

"Pretty much."

"Hey! I think that's Caleb! He was dressed as Spiderman!"

"Dude! Half the kids in this town were dressed as Spiderman."

"Oh, yeah."

"I heard that there was this one kid on the other side of town dressed as the Green Goblin... I wouldn't want to be him right now."

"We should probably go after my brother."

"Then what? If he's Spiderman, he's gonna keep being Spiderman until this thing wears off or gets fixed or somethin."

"But I've got to do something... I can't just sit here."

"Do you want to get back under the porch... that seemed productive."

"Didn't you see those devils and witches? I don't want to know what they would have done if they caught me."

"No. I must have missed them... Hey, I don't know if you've thought about this, but when this is all over, no one is going to be held responsible for anything they did today, right?"

"I guess not."

"So, what if you had the chance to do ANYTHING... no consequences?"

"I don't know..."

"I do."

"What are you thinking about doing?"

"This..."

...

...

...

"I think there's gonna be consequences."

"Like what?"

"This."

The End
